Paula Farrell

Paula Farrell currently serves as Director of the Office of Policy and Legislative Review at the U.S. Department of the Treasury. This office is composed of four financial economists and is responsible for performing policy analysis and developing policy recommendations for senior Treasury officials on legislative and other proposals involving the Government borrowing, lending, and investing.

She joined the Treasury in 1975 as a mathematician in the Office of the Government Actuary and began working in the Legislative Review Unit of the Office of Government Financing in 1979. She became manager of the Legislative Review Unit in 1982 and Deputy Director of the Office of Government Financing in 1988. In 2002, she became Director of the Office of Policy and Legislative Review.

Paula holds a B.A. in Mathematics (received cum laude) from Trinity College (D.C.) and a M.B.A. in Finance from the University of Maryland. She also did graduate work in Mathematics at the University of Delaware. Prior to joining the Treasury, she taught Mathematics for several years. She is married and has two children, a daughter, 19, and a son, 24. Paula has been a member of Executive Women in Government since 2003.
